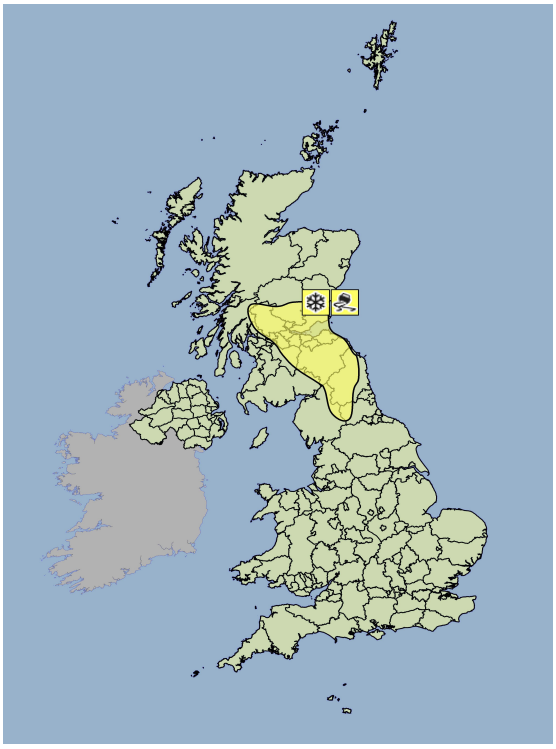
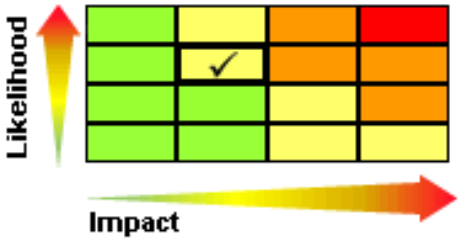
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A front over central and southeast Scotland will move slowly and erratically southwards into the far north of England. This will bring outbreaks of mainly rain and sleet over eastern coastal areas and to low levels, but some snow to low levels inland and heavy snow likely across higher ground at times.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 10:00 on Sat, 13th Feb 2016 until 23:55 on Sat, 13th Feb 2016

Outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow over central and southeast Scotland will gradually clear south during Saturday, to become increasingly focused over parts of northern England. Some locally heavy outbreaks of snow are still likely over high ground with snow also to low levels at times, mainly inland. 1-3 cm of snow is possible above 100-200 m and 5 to 10 cm above 300 m. In addition, icy surfaces are possible, particularly where rain falls onto any freezing surfaces and over lying snow.

Please be aware of difficult travelling conditions and the risk of some transport disruption due to both snow and icy surfaces.

This warning has been updated to move the area further south, whilst at the same time lowering the risk of medium impacts due to snow.
